Yusof: Portrait of a President

By Teater Ekamatra

Director's message

Let us delve into the life of Yusof bin Ishak, the first president of Singapore.

Yusof bin Ishak was a remarkable individual deeply attuned to his environment. He aspired to be the best not only for himself, but for his entire community. He recognised the urgent need to elevate the standard of the Malays.

The establishment of Utusan Melayu was his means of championing his people, empowering them through access to news and information. He understood that knowledge fosters self-understanding and a deeper comprehension of the world. With knowledge, they could engage in critical thinking and make informed decisions. Furthermore, knowledge plays a crucial role in advocating for social change, enabling them to overcome obstacles, innovate and contribute to societal betterment. This was the essence of Yusof Ishak's mission, executed in a humble manner. He travelled from village to village to persuade them of the importance of Utusan Melayu and sacrificed his own electricity when his neighbours had none, so that he could be equal with them. Even after becoming the head of state, he chose to reside in a smaller house called Melati House, previously used by the part-time workers of the Istana.

As human beings, we possess distinct values and principles that define our individuality. These values serve as guidelines in our lives, influencing our actions and decisions. They are shaped by both external factors, such as family, culture, peers, education, and religion, and internal processes, including personal experiences, reflection and independent thought. These influences, particularly during childhood, establish a foundational moral compass. However, they are dynamic and can be refined or altered over time through new experiences and conscious self-evaluation.

By sharing the life of Yusof Ishak and the individuals who shaped him, we are inspired and informed of our own identity and potential. In the face of a precarious world characterised by heightened political, economic, environmental and social challenges, it is with great responsibility that we uphold our values and strive to create a beautiful and peaceful society.

I conclude with a line by Yusof from the play:

"I realise now that if we set aside our principles and ethics, we will begin to lose our integrity. Without integrity, we are only a hollowed shell, empty, rootless and useless. That is the important lesson that I must teach my family and my children."

Thank you for watching Yusof: Portrait of a President.

BEFORE THE SHOW

What will I be watching?

You are about to watch Yusof: Portrait of a President, a play about Singapore's first President.

- Actors will take on different roles to tell the story of Yusof Ishak, from his time as a journalist to his role as a national leader.
- The play explores big questions like:

What makes a good leader?

How do we stay true to our values?

- Expect a mix of drama, emotions, and moments that show the human side of history.
- Look out for key scenes in newsrooms, political meetings and quiet family moments.

What is a Playwright?

A playwright writes the scripts of theatre plays. They decide what each character says, where each scene takes place and how the story begins, develops and ends.

- Zizi Azah binte Abdul Majid is the playwright who wrote Yusof: Portrait of a President.
- Playwrights bring history to life by imagining conversations, exploring emotions, and highlighting moments that help us understand the past in new and exciting ways.

- Some playwrights write historical plays – stories based on real people and events. But these aren't just facts on stage!
- To find out more about Zizi Azah binte Abdul Majid, refer to page 5.

Activity 3 REFLECTION

Why do you think it's important for a theatre company to tell stories about Singapore's history?

Prompt

If you could ask Zizi one question about writing Yusof: Portrait of a President, what would it be?

QUESTIONS TO THINK ABOUT BEFORE THE SHOW

As you watch the play, try to keep these questions in your mind:

- How do the characters feel at different times in the story?
- What reasons or beliefs guide Yusof Ishak's choices?
- What challenges or problems does he face? How does he deal with them?
- How do Yusof Ishak's personal values affect his decisions?
- What do you think the play is trying to say about what makes a good leader?

Jot down or draw out your first thoughts after the show.

AFTER THE SHOW

Activity 4 REFLECTING ON THE PLAY

Objective: Recall key moments and characters in the play and connect them to leadership qualities.

1. Who were the main characters?

2. What were the turning points in Yusof Ishak's journey?

3. What challenges did Yusof Ishak face personally and publicly?

Discussion Prompts

• What was your biggest takeaway from the play?

• Which moment impressed you most, and why?

Activity 5 LEADERSHIP UNDER PRESSURE

Objective: Understand the challenges Yusof Ishak faced and how he made tough decisions.
Identify three challenges Yusof Ishak faced and the decisions he made in the play.

Challenges	What was at stake?

What decision did he make?

What value did he show?

Activity 6

VALUES IN ACTION: HOT-SEATING

Objective: Build empathy by stepping into characters' shoes.

Take turns "hot-seating" as Yusof Ishak, Noor Aishah, Ramley, Aziz, or Tunku Abdul Rahman. You can also roleplay as reporters from Utusan Melayu, asking tough questions and uncovering different perspectives.

Reflection

Did playing the character (or reporter) change your understanding of their challenges? Why?

Sample Reporter Questions:

"Yusof, what was the biggest challenge you faced as President?"

"Noor Aishah, how did you support your husband during difficult times?"

"Tunku Abdul Rahman, what inspired your decisions for the country?"

"Ramley/Aziz, how did your actions impact the people around you?"

Activity 7 THEN AND NOW – COMPARING LEADERSHIP

Objective: Connect the play's themes to leadership challenges today.

1. What issues did Yusof Ishak face?

2. How do these compare to issues today?

3. What lessons from Yusof Ishak's story are still important?

In your opinion, how important are these qualities for a leader to have? Rank these values from 1 (most important) to 5 (least important).

Honesty

Courage

Intelligence

Communication skills

Empathy

Follow-up

1. Which quality do you think Yusof Ishak valued most? Why?

2. If you could add one more leadership quality, what would it be?
